GUIDE TO MENTAL HEALTH RESOURCES

For First Nations, Métis & Inuit people in Winnipeg.

USING THIS GUIDE

The Winnipeg Regional Health Authority Aboriginal Health Programs in collaboration with the Regional Mental Health Program has put together this guide to assist First Nations, Métis, and Inuit peoples find mental health care information and services within Winnipeg. If someone is experiencing mental health problems or emotional health concerns, this guide will provide information on types of services available in Winnipeg and how to access the various services.

MENTAL HEALTH IN ABORIGINAL CULTURE

Aboriginal peoples of Canada are defined according to the Canadian Constitution Act (1982) as “Indian (First Nations), Inuit and Métis people of Canada.” The following are definitions specific to each Aboriginal group:

First Nations
Descendants of the original inhabitants of North America. Although the term “First Nation” is now widely used, there is no legal definition for it. (Indian and Northern Affairs Canada, 2005).

Métis
Métis means a person who self-identifies as Métis, is of historic Métis National Ancestry, is distinct from other Aboriginal Peoples and is accepted by the Métis Nation (Métis National Council, 2002).

Inuit
The Aboriginal people of Arctic Canada who live primarily in Nunavut the Northwest Territories, Labrador, and Northern Quebec. Inuit means, “the people” in Inuktitut, the Inuit Language. (Indian and Northern Affairs Canada, 2005).

THE PEOPLE

The Aboriginal community is an important part of Manitoba’s heritage and future. Over 15% of Manitoba’s total population and 10% of Winnipeg’s total population consider themselves First Nation, Métis or Inuit peoples (Statistics Canada, 2008). Winnipeg currently has the largest urban Aboriginal population of the major cities in Canada.

Although there is great diversity among the 64 First Nation communities within Manitoba in their usage of language, ceremonies, religious beliefs, and community traditions, holistic wellness remains a priority among most groups in maintaining their cultural strength into the future.

EFFECTS OF COLONIZATION AND RESIDENTIAL SCHOOLS

Many issues facing the Aboriginal community today stem from the long history of colonization. First Nation families were deeply hurt by the government policy of sending their children away to residential school, which began in 1874 and continued until the last school was closed in 1996.

The purpose of residential schooling was to assimilate Aboriginal community children into mainstream Canadian society by disconnecting them from family and communities; cutting all ties with languages, customs, and beliefs. The separation of children from their families and traditional culture had a devastating and long-lasting effect on the Aboriginal community. Many young adults that came back after being in residential schools had been traumatized by the separation and some by physical, mental and sexual abuse they had been exposed to in the schools.

Generations of people did not learn their family and community values including their culture, languages, parenting practices, and ways of living on the land. Many people felt stuck between two worlds, not belonging to either, which resulted in identity confusion, high rates of suicide, depression and substance abuse. Other health concerns, such as poor housing and less access to nutrition have also affected the health of the Aboriginal community.

Many children were victims of abuse in the residential school system. As a result, the Government of Canada has developed the Indian Residential Schools (IRS) Resolution Health Support Program to begin work towards healing for those involved. Other efforts are being made to improve the health and well-being of the Aboriginal community. First Nations, Métis and Inuit peoples are coming together to share concerns, gather resources, find ways to improve health and well-being, and return to wholeness. The journey of healing from the past will come from within the Aboriginal culture, reconnection as a community and from sacred traditions.

INDIAN RESIDENTIAL SCHOOLS RESOLUTION HEALTH SUPPORT PROGRAM

The Indian Residential Schools Resolution Health Support Program provides emotional health and wellness support to former Indian Residential School students and their families, regardless of status and place of residence, who are eligible for the Common Experience Payment and /or resolving an IRS claim through the Alternative Dispute Resolution process, Independent Assessment process or litigation.

Eligible former students and their families may have access to:

- Professional Counselling
- Emotional Support provided by Resolution Health Support Workers
- Cultural Support provided by Elders
- Assistance with the cost of transportation

Approval from Health Canada must be obtained before treatment begins. A crisis line is available to provide immediate emotional assistance and can be reached 24 hours a day, 7 days a week: 1-866-925-4419

MENTAL HEALTH ACROSS CULTURES

Being mentally healthy means feeling a sense of control over one’s life, feeling able to make decisions, coping with life’s challenges and participating in life in meaningful ways because there is balance in the social, physical, spiritual, economic and mental aspects of life. When people of any cultural background are feeling mentally healthy, they can feel good about themselves most of the time. Traditionally, Aboriginal cultural view of mental health and well being is a balance of the body, mind, emotions and spirit which is maintained through good relationships within oneself, with others, within the community and Creation.

MENTAL HEALTH PROBLEMS ARE COMMON

Mental health problems are common among people of all ages, cultures and backgrounds. There are a number of reasons why mental health may not be at its best. Living with problems such as poverty, discrimination, unemployment, violence or substance abuse can have a very negative effect on mental health. Life events such as the death of a loved one, being in an accident, losing housing or a job can also be a challenge and sometimes cause mental health problems.

WHAT IS MENTAL ILLNESS?

All people have times of feeling down or sad, have trouble concentrating, talk out loud to themselves, or have a thought in mind and can’t get rid of it. These things are normal.

When a person is mentally ill, these kinds of feelings, thoughts and behaviors are extreme and get in the way of the person’s ability to go about their day.

Many cultures do not use the words mental illness to describe when a person has emotional problems. Instead they may describe how a person has changed in mood, thoughts or behaviors, or changed in how he or she relates to others.

Examples of some possible changes or problems in behavior:

- Sleeping too much, or not able to sleep at all
- Not keeping clean and cared for
- Avoiding social contact and previously enjoyed activities
- Laughing or crying inappropriately
- Talking in ways that don’t make sense
- Strange movements or behaviors (such as: talking out loud to no one; rigid or unusual body positions)
- Unable to control behavior (such as: can’t stop walking back and forth; sudden violence; washing hands over and over)

Examples of some possible changes or problems in feelings or mood:

- Extreme feelings of “feeling great” and excitement
- Angry, scared or suspicious for no logical reason
- Extreme sadness or hopelessness, sometimes leading to thoughts or talk of suicide
- Sudden emotional changes and mood swings
- Unable to feel or express happiness or interest in anything

Examples of some severe changes or problems in thoughts and perceptions:

- Hearing, seeing, smelling things that aren’t there
- Unrealistic or mistaken beliefs (such as: people are trying to kill you; a movie star is in love with you; you are God or a famous person)
- Having certain thoughts constantly and not being able to stop or change the thoughts
- Serious inability to concentrate or unable to connect thoughts together in a sensible way
- Constant and extreme worry or anxiety

If someone is experiencing these changes or problems, it is recommended that he or she have a physical assessment to rule out any underlying physical conditions that may have an effect on their mental well-being. A doctor or nurse with special training can determine what the problems are, by talking to the person and those close to them about any changes in thoughts, mood or behavior and any changes the person has experienced recently such as a job loss or the death of a loved one. It may take some time to make a diagnosis, but based on the information gathered a recommended treatment plan may include medication, counselling or therapy or self-care. Some people may choose to seek out other paths to healing such as through guidance from an Elder or spiritual caregiver. It is important to share traditional healing needs with health care providers.

PATHWAYS TO HEALING

There may be many different reasons why a person experiences disharmony or imbalance. Pain, hurt, rejection, disappointment and loneliness may cause a person to experience mental health problems. For some people, working through these painful feelings and experiences is viewed as part of a necessary spiritual journey. There are many ways of healing disharmony or imbalance within the Aboriginal culture. Some people use ceremonies, guidance from Elders, wholesome nutrition, meaningful activity, and connection with family and the land as part of their pathways to healing process.

Worldview of Mental Health:

Mental wellness is a lifelong journey to achieve wellness and balance of body, mind and spirit. Mental wellness includes self-esteem, personal dignity, cultural identity and connectedness in the presence of harmonious physical, emotional, mental and spiritual wellness. Mental wellness must be defined in terms of the values and beliefs of Aboriginal people. (First Nations and Inuit Health, Mental Wellness Framework, 2002).

PROMOTE AND PROTECT MENTAL HEALTH

Being mentally healthy involves accepting who we are and realizing that we have strengths as well as limitations. Dealing with problems effectively when they arise, taking responsibility for actions and setting realistic goals also helps to build personal and community resilience. Resilience is the ability to bounce back from life’s challenges in a positive way. It means that when faced with challenges, hope can be maintained, positive coping strategies can be used, and even confidence is gained to deal with future challenges.

By doing everyday things to care for body, mind and spirit, personal mental health and resilience can be promoted. Eating well, getting regular exercise and getting adequate rest and sleep will not only keep the body healthy but the mind healthy as well. There are many simple and inexpensive ways to stay physically active. Walking is one of the best ways to keep active every day. Keeping well also involves maintaining good relationships with family or friends and feeling connected with the community. Some simple ways of staying connected could include things like volunteering at the local

CULTURE, SPIRITUALITY & TRADITIONAL HEALING

Traditional healing may be used to address both physical and mental health issues. Many traditional healing practices are used today by Elders and Traditional Healers/helpers and include the use of natural herbs, sacred ceremonies, song and dance, the vision quest, prayer, the sweat lodge, and the healing circle. Healing practices may include traditional teachings to assist people in gaining wisdom from their experiences and regaining their sense of balance and belonging. Healing ceremonies are individualized for each person after the healer assesses the person's needs and decides what traditional approach to use. A ceremony may be conducted, instructions given to the person, and the person may be assisted in their healing journey. For some, their beliefs and practices form an integral part of their being and is a way of life.

Traditional Practices

Some traditional practices include:

SMUDGING — a sacred ritual done to spiritually cleanse and be open and ready for positive healing energy. The smudge consists of one of the four sacred plants: tobacco, sweet grass, cedar and sage or a mixture of the plants.

SHARING/TALKING CIRCLES — a ceremony used by some people to discuss issues or share feelings in a safe climate of trust and cooperation. Equality and respect are encouraged and reinforced through the sharing circle.

SACRED ITEMS — many items may be used by traditional Aboriginal communities for ceremonies and healing gatherings.

TOBACCO OFFERING — tobacco holds a special significance and serves as a means of opening communication with the spirit world. It symbolizes honesty and respect.

SACRED TEACHINGS — sacred teachings or values are taught to promote healthy living. There are a variety of teachings. Some include: wisdom, love, respect, bravery/courage, honesty, humility and truth. They are intended to help the community and environment live in harmony.

SPIRIT NAMES — names generally given in the language of the individual being named. The name describes an individual's character and often comes with some responsibility of serving the community. These names are special and much preparation is required prior to receiving them. Only some Elders have the gift of name giving.

SWEAT LODGE CEREMONY — this ceremony may vary in how it is conducted as well as in the teaching that explains its origin. It is generally conducted in sacred lodges, dome shaped structures often built from bent willow, for the purpose of prayer, cleansing and purifying body, mind and spirit.

Traditional Healers

Some traditional healers are:

SPIRITUALIST — focuses on the spiritual well-being of a person and acts on his or her behalf to recommend lifestyle changes to the individual or family and offerings to various kind spirits. This person often serves as a counsellor, mentor or teacher to individuals and families.

HERBALISTS — uses knowledge of traditional medicinal plants. Practice can be highly specialized in one area, such as remedies for specific ailments, or diverse for other types of illness.

DIAGNOSIS SPECIALIST OR SEER — communicates with spirits, the supernatural and the physical entities that assist in the diagnosis. Diagnostics are often the seers or communicators through ceremony who identify ailments, remedies or ceremonies required to restore good spiritual, emotional and physical health and well-being.

MEDICINE PEOPLE — engage in ritual, ceremonial activity and prayer. Medicine people may possess sacred items and the rites to rituals, songs and medicines that have been inherited from parents, grandparents, or that they earned through apprenticeship with a respected medicine man or woman. Depending on their nation, they are also conductors of community ceremonies. These individuals often sacrifice their daily lives to ritual, prayer and healing.

HEALER — heals in a variety of ways, such as a gift of touch or energy work. A healer can be ritualistic, but also may have an ability to use a variety of therapies to heal people spirituality, emotionally or physically.

MIDWIFE — has specialized traditional knowledge in prenatal care, childbirth and aftercare. The midwife may employ the use of massage, diets, medicines and ritual, prayers and counselling.

ELDER — is considered exceptionally wise in the ways of culture and the teachings of the Great Spirit. The Elder is recognized for wisdom, stability, humour and the ability to know what is appropriate in a particular situation. The community looks to Elders for guidance and sound judgment because Elders are caring and are known to share the fruits of their labours and experiences with others in the community. (Aboriginal Healing Foundation)

HELP WITH HEALING

It is important to get help early to move forward on a healing path. It is a good idea to visit a doctor to check overall health and rule out any other physical illness. Doctors need the details about mental and emotional changes being experienced so they can provide the best advice and treatment. Traditional healing needs should also be shared with health care providers. If possible, it is best to keep one family doctor so he or she gets to know one's complete health history.

To find a family doctor who is accepting new patients call Family Doctor Connections at 204-786-7111 or contact the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Manitoba at 204-774-4344 (www.cpsm.mb.ca).

Specialists such as a psychiatrist, psychologist or other mental health professional may be referred to for treatment of mental health concerns. Mental health professionals are trained to assess, diagnose and treat a full range of emotional and psychological problems. Other professionals who may be helpful include: psychiatric nurses, social workers, community mental health workers or occupational therapists. Some mental health care providers specialize in specific problems or age groups.

Comfort levels for sharing mental and emotional concerns differ for everyone. Health care providers understand this and will talk about things at a pace that is comfortable for each person. It is always okay to ask a health care provider questions.

ADDICTION SERVICES

Alcohol, drugs and substances have negatively impacted the health and well being of many people including some Aboriginal people. An addiction can have devastating physical and emotional consequences not only for the person with the addiction, but also for families, friends and communities. There are a number of programs and services working to help people overcome addiction and find a new path in life.

Manitoba Health provides funding to addiction agencies and regional health authorities to provide a variety of addictions treatment services for youth and adults across Manitoba. For more information about addictions services and support, contact one of these agencies:

COUNSELLING SERVICES

The path to wellness may include medical treatment, professional counselling, or therapy. Counselling can address one or more of the following issues:

- Effective coping
- Strategies for daily living
- Relationships and family communication

- Changing negative thought patterns
- Dealing with losses and grief
- Dealing with the loss of a loved one to suicide
- Residential school trauma
- Historical trauma
- Intergenerational trauma
- Childhood issues of abuse, neglect and trauma
- Crisis planning
- Managing emotions in a healthy way
- Problem-solving
- Building self-awareness and self-esteem
- Developing new skills

Finding a Counsellor

There are a variety of ways to access counselling services:

Ask a doctor for a referral to a qualified counsellor (a referral may be required by the counsellor or by individual health insurance plans to receive coverage).

See the Yellow Pages under Counsellors or contact these professional organizations:

10 Psychological Association of Manitoba

162-2025 Corydon Avenue,

Winnipeg, MB R3S 0G9
Phone: 204-888-4841
Fax: 204-888-8638
www.crpnm.mb.ca

Counselling services are also provided by the community agencies listed next. You will not need a referral from a doctor. There may be a fee or no cost for the counselling or there may be a wait list. It is best to call the agency and ask for information about their counselling service.

Here are some possible questions to ask the counselling service before a first appointment.

Do the counsellors have any experience or knowledge in counselling Aboriginal people?

What is the education, training, licensure and years in practice of the counsellors? (Double check credentials by contacting the provincial licensing body.)

What are the hours, fees, length of sessions and which insurance providers do the counsellors work with?

What is the treatment approach and philosophy?

Do the counsellors specialize in certain disorders or age groups?

CRISIS SERVICES

A person in crisis will feel overwhelmed, afraid or anxious, and won't know what to do about it. A person in crisis can feel out of control. Often an event such as a relationship break-up, job loss, injury, accident, family violence, bad news or the death of someone important has happened. Sometimes a crisis is caused by many other stresses that have been going on for a long time and the person can no longer deal with them. It is important to reach out for help right away.

There are health care providers in the community who are specially trained to help people who are in a crisis. They will listen. They will also help the person sort out choices, help with safety concerns and find other helpful services in the community.
